It was the last round of the Pizza Toss. Angelo’s Pizza Parlor held the contest every year. Whoever tossed a whirling disk of pizza dough the highest and caught it again would get free pizza for a month.

Dan had told everyone that he would win. He had even started to plan his first free pizza party. Now that the contest was on, Dan was more confident than ever. He watched as eight pizza tossers competed before him. Angelo himself decided how high each disk of pizza dough went. So far, the winning dough whirled 6 feet, 7 inches above the ground. At last it was Dan’s turn. Angelo handed him a disk of dough and said, “Three…two…one…start tossing!”

Dan tossed the dough into the air. The crowd cheered as he threw it higher and higher. Shouts of “Hurrah!” filled his ears. This time I’ll catch it behind my back, Dan thought. He threw the pizza higher still, and reached behind his back to catch it. Dan looked up. His pizza dough was stuck on a street light!

“I’ll show them that I can write well,” Ling thought. Back in China, she had gotten the best grades in English class. But ever since her family had moved to Florida, her reports had been coming back all marked up. Ling asked her teacher if there was something she could do to improve her writing. Her teacher told her about an after-school writing program for people who hadn’t grown up speaking English. Ling joined the program. She had always been proud of her good grades, and she wasn’t about to let people here think she wasn’t smart!

Read the letter below. Then complete the Venn diagram to compare and contrast the two Fourth of July celebrations.

Dear Zack,

The Fourth of July celebration here in Maine was really different from what I’m used to. Instead of cooking hamburgers on a grill, we cooked lobsters and corn! We made a big fire on the beach and put the cooking pot on a wire grill over the coals. In Texas we have a July 4th parade, and they have one here, too. Instead of floats and decorated tractors, in Maine, there is a boat parade. All the boats have colored lights on them. I got to ride in a lobster boat named Wanda. However, some things are the same wherever you go. The celebration ended with a fireworks show, just like it does at home.

Your friend,

Sam

Malika stared out the window, feeling cranky. It was the first week of summer vacation, and it had rained every single day! The phone rang, but Malika ignored it. Jessie was calling again. Malika had been so grumpy that she hadn’t even wanted to talk to her best friend.

Then Malika heard her mother pick up the phone. “Hello, Jessie . . . yes, Malika is home. Wait a moment, please.” Malika’s mother came in and offered her the phone.

Malika shook her head. She grumbled, “I don’t feel like talking right now.” Her mother said, “Malika, it is rude to ignore your friends. Please talk to Jessie.” Finally, after a long pause, Malika reached for the phone. She took a deep breath, and said “Hi, Jessie.”

1. Why is Malika so miserable?

2. Do you think it is proper for Malika to refuse to talk with Jessie? Why or why not?

3. In your opinion, is Malika starting the summer the right way? Use details from the passage to support your answer.

Last year I was an exchange student in Bergen, Norway. It was a big change from my home in Santa Monica, California. When I arrived, I wasn’t prepared for the weather at all. My Norwegian hosts, Nels and Anna, laughed when they saw the shorts and T-shirts in my suitcase. They loaned me rain boots, warm pants, and a thick wool sweater.

Like Santa Monica, Bergen is by the water. However, the North Sea is a lot colder than the Pacific Ocean! People don’t go surfing as we do back home. The cold Norwegian weather didn’t stop us from having fun, however. We explored Bergen, hiked on glaciers, and visited fish markets. We found that all of us like sardines!

My hosts taught me many Norwegian words. I was surprised to find out that Nels and Anna both speak perfect English. That’s because everyone in Norway learns English at school. Next year Nels and Anna are coming to visit me in Santa Monica. I can’t wait to teach them how to surf!

Jane had been getting ready for her birthday party for weeks. She had sent out a lot of invitations, along with a wish list of presents she wanted. She had folded origami cats and dogs for party favors. She had made cupcakes. Jane really wanted her party to be a big success.

On the day of Jane’s party, her mother drove her to the animal shelter where she volunteered. “Hi, Jane!” said Ms. Rogers. “Are you working today?”

“Nope, I’m having a party!” said Jane. “And I hope I get a lot of presents!”

Ms. Rogers laughed. “You always say what you think, Jane!”

Soon the party guests arrived at the animal shelter. Jane gave them their cupcakes and party favors. She took them on a tour of the animal shelter.

“It’s present time!” Jane said. One by one, she opened her birthday presents. There were dog leashes and balls. There were toys for the cats. There were bags of kitty litter and cleaning supplies. “Thank you all so much!” said Jane. “You made my birthday wishes come true!”

Think about the information above. Then, on a separate sheet of paper, write a summary of the story.
Ben had not seen his cat Elsie for two days. He was afraid that a coyote had gotten her. Ben looked for her in all of her favorite places. She was not sunning herself on the back fence. She was not trying to nap in his mother’s laundry basket. She was not even bothering the chickens. The barn was the last place she could be hiding.

“Here, Elsie!” Ben called out as he walked inside the barn. Silence. Ben turned to leave, but then he heard a tiny mewing noise and another and another. Kittens! Ben scrambled up the ladder to the hayloft. There was Elsie, the proud mother of six new kittens!

Red Blaze watched his band of mares and foals graze near a watering hole. The big stallion was always watching, ready to defend his band. Suddenly, Red Blaze caught the scent of another stallion. A young newcomer was challenging Red Blaze for control of the band. The big red horse turned to face his challenger. Snorting loudly, he pawed the ground. The other stallion approached. With a piercing scream, Red Blaze reared up on his hind legs. That was enough to scare the challenger away. Red Blaze trotted back to join his mares. He had won the challenge.

The Internet has many important uses. Electronic mail, or e-mail, is one of the most common uses of the Internet. E-mail gives people all over the world a fast, easy, inexpensive way to stay in touch. The Internet is also used for finding and sharing information. It is like a huge library. People can find articles, photographs, videos, and software. Even newspapers and magazines can be found online. The Internet offers a treasure chest of knowledge, and most of it is free! Since the early 1990s, the Internet has helped people find information, share experiences, and stay in touch. Who knows what other uses it will have in the future?

Discuss with your child the ways in which this paragraph might be different if the author had wanted to express a strong opinion against the Internet.

Read the paragraph. Then think about what the author’s purpose and perspective are. Use that information to fill in the graphic organizer.

Native Americans have been making baskets and pottery for thousands of years. Scientists disagree over which came first. Some pieces of pottery have been found that date back tens of thousands of years. Baskets that old have not been found. However, baskets are made of materials that don’t last for a very long time. It may be true that baskets were made before pottery, but if so, no proof exists because the baskets rotted away long ago. Which came first, baskets or pottery? No one knows for sure. This fascinating question may never be answered.

Mimi was excited. Her teacher had chosen her to take the class guinea pig home for the weekend. On Friday her mother came to the classroom after school. Mimi picked up the guinea pig’s cage. “This is Nicky!” Mimi said.

“Achoo!” her mother replied. She helped Mimi take Nicky and his supplies to the car. She sneezed all the way home. “I guess I’m allergic to guinea pigs,” she said.

Mimi set up Nicky’s cage in the family room. Mimi’s mother sneezed and sneezed. Mimi moved Nicky’s cage to her bedroom. Mimi’s mother couldn’t walk down the hallway without having a sneezing attack.

By Saturday, Mimi knew she had to do something. She called her friend Bridget. “How do you feel about pet sitting until Monday?” she asked.

Bridget and her dad picked up the guinea pig an hour later.

Read the passage. Then think about what the author’s purpose and perspective are. Use that information to fill in the graphic organizer.

Sea turtles are not the only endangered marine animals. Whales, dolphins, and porpoises are also at risk. Unlike fish, these fascinating sea creatures are warm-blooded. They belong to a group called cetaceans. Cetaceans live in every ocean on Earth.

Cetaceans play an important role in marine life. Their health tells us about the health of the oceans. When pollution harms cetaceans, scientists know that the health of all marine life is at risk. There are other threats to cetaceans too. Some get tangled in fishing nets. Others are hunted. Still others collide with ships.

People are working to eliminate threats to cetaceans. We must support these efforts, or these wonderful sea mammals may disappear.

Read the paragraph. Circle the clue words and phrases that signal cause-and-effect relationships in the text. Then write the correct cause or effect in the boxes below.

Many animals are protected by mimicry or camouflage. The poplar hawk moth has wings that look like the leaves of a tree. As a result, it can hide in trees. The squash vine borer moth looks like a wasp. This makes predators stay away because they do not like wasps. The arctic fox changes colors with the seasons. The arctic fox’s fur is gray-brown. Because of this, it can blend in with its summer habitat. As winter approaches, the arctic fox turns white. It can then hide in the snow to escape predators.

Causes

- The poplar hawk moth’s wings look like the leaves of a tree.

- The squash vine borer moth looks like a wasp.

Effects

- Predators stay away from it.

- The arctic fox can blend in with its summer habitat.

Read the paragraph. Circle the clue words that signal cause-and-effect relationships. Then complete the diagrams below.

In 2004 and 2005, hurricanes struck the Gulf Coast of the United States. These storms had a huge impact on the coast. They caused many beaches to wash away. The coastline from Texas to Florida was affected by the storms. The shape of the coastline changed so much that some experts believe new maps must be made. The hurricanes also drenched the Louisiana coast with salt water, causing the marsh grass to die. As a result, coastal ducks were left with little to eat.

1. Powerful hurricanes struck the Gulf Coast of the United States.

2. The marsh grass died.

Joel was trying to make popcorn on the stove. Suddenly, the oil in the pan he was using caught fire. Joel ran down the hall and pounded on his neighbor’s door. “Help! Fire!” he shouted.

Mr. Johnson opened his door and asked, “What’s going on?”
“I set a pan on fire! It has oil in it!” Joel shouted.
Mr. Johnson quickly wheeled toward Joel’s apartment. Joel followed Mr. Johnson inside. The oil in the pan was still burning, but the fire had not spread.

Predict Outcomes

Read the story below. Then use clues from the story along with what you know from real life to make a prediction.

It was the day of the school softball game. “I can’t find my backpack,” Lara cried. “What will I do?”

Her friend Rob looked worried. “Have you looked everywhere?” he asked. “I looked for it at home and at school this morning,” Lara said. “My softball glove was in there,” she groaned. “Now I can’t play in the game.”

Rob remembered that Lara had her backpack with her when she was at his house the day before.

“Let’s go to my house, Lara. I think you’ll be able to play in the game after all,” Rob said with a smile.

Ask your child to write four sentences that include pronouns. Then ask him or her to rewrite the sentences, replacing each pronoun with a noun.
With your child, discuss the Vocabulary Words and their meanings. Over the next several days, try to use some of the words in conversations.
Tourism brings many visitors to areas where beautiful coral reefs grow. As a result, the coral reefs suffer. People come to snorkel, dive, and boat. These activities are bad for the reefs because people and their boats break the fragile coral. They also stir up sediment, which creates stress on corals. Large numbers of tourists increase the demand for fish and shellfish at local restaurants. Because of this, some of the world’s most popular coral reefs are overfished. Today people are working to balance the important tourist industry with the need to protect the coral reefs.

Discuss with your child the effects that people have on the coast nearest where you live.
Read the story. Then complete the charts below.

Tyler was teaching his friend Kyle to snorkel. “Put the snorkel tube in your mouth and breathe through it,” he said.

Kyle put the snorkel tube in his mouth and lowered himself into the deep end.

“Bottoms up!” he said, and dove straight down near the 10-foot marker.

“Kyle, wait! That’s not how you do it!” yelled Tyler. It was too late. Kyle came up coughing and spitting out water.

“Why didn't you tell me how this thing works?” he complained.

Think about the information above. Then, on a separate sheet of paper, write a summary of “So You Want to Be an Inventor?”.

- Benjamin Franklin: lightning rod, Franklin stove, odometer; Benjamin Franklin probably needed bifocals.
- Alexander Graham Bell: telephone; Georges Mestral: velcro; Velcro is the perfect fastener.
- The Wright Brothers: airplane; Poor Orville!
Read the paragraph below. Then write the correct answers.

Some inventions have never become famous. The electric dog-washer is one example of an invention that didn't make it. The idea of an electric dog-washer is very silly. Giving a dog a bath is both fun and easy. You can buy pet shampoo at any pet shop. The electric dog-washer didn't become famous because no one needs this device. The inventor forgot the first rule of inventing: find a need and fill it.

1. Statement: Some inventions have never become famous.
   Fact or Opinion?:
   Evidence:

2. Statement: Giving a dog a bath is both fun and easy.
   Fact or Opinion?:

Read the directions for making a weather vane. Then answer the questions.

Materials:
- scissors
- two cardboard triangles, one large and one small
- a drinking straw
- a pin with a big head
- a pencil with an eraser

Directions:
First, cut a ½ inch-long slit at each end of the straw. Then slide the tip of the bigger triangle into one of the slits and the wide end of the smaller triangle into the other slit. Next, hold the straw horizontally. Find the point near the middle of the straw where you can balance it on one finger and it doesn’t tip forwards or backwards. Mark the point, and have an adult push the pin through the straw at that point and into the pencil’s eraser. Now you can hold up your finished weather vane to see which way the wind is blowing.

Questions:
1. What is the first thing you should do?

2. What are the slits in the straw for?

3. What is the last step?

4. What might happen if you don’t follow the directions in the right order?

A woman and her son were on their way to market in the next village. They walked beside their donkey, which would carry their purchases home. A man on a horse passed by. “How foolish!” he exclaimed. “You have a fine donkey, yet neither of you is riding!” Hearing this advice, the boy hopped onto the donkey’s back.

A little later, a woman passed by. “Tsk! Tsk! How selfish you are to make your mother walk while you ride!” Red-faced, the boy helped his mother climb up, too.

Still later, an older woman passed them. “How cruel to make that little donkey carry you!” she scolded. Fed up with the advice of others, the mother and her son both got off the donkey and walked the rest of the way to the village.

Think about the information above. Then, on a separate sheet of paper, write a summary of “Juan Verdades: The Man Who Couldn’t Tell a Lie.”
Two badgers worked together in the kitchen one afternoon to bake a cake. As they took it out of its pan, a little piece broke off and fell on the floor. "Now look what you’ve done! The cake is uneven," the first badger said.

"We’ll have to even it out," the second one replied. She sliced off the broken corner with a knife.

"You’ve cut it at the wrong angle!" the first badger complained, slicing off another piece. The badgers kept quarreling and slicing. At last, they stood back to admire their cake. Most of it lay in pieces. Although perfectly even, the cake was now only two inches wide.

I think that Alexander Calder is the best artist who ever lived. Even though he died more than 30 years ago, his art looks fresh and modern. You really should see some of his enormous sculptures. Many of them are outdoors, in public places like city plazas. They are made of metal and have names like “Flying Dragon” and “Flamingo.” Alexander Calder worked with many different materials, including steel, wood, oil paints, ink, and watercolors. He is especially famous for his mobiles. Mobiles are made with objects hanging from wires and rods that move.

Fox and Stork were friends, but Fox liked playing jokes too much for his own good. One day, Fox invited Stork over for lunch. Fox cooked up a delicious soup. He served the soup in a shallow dish, thinking that Stork would look silly trying to drink the soup with her long bill.

Stork was not pleased with Fox’s joke. Stork sat politely through lunch and didn’t even try to eat the soup. Then she went home and ate a proper meal.

The next day, Stork invited Fox over for dinner. She made an excellent stew. She served it in the tallest, thinnest jars she could find. Stork started to eat, but Fox couldn’t reach the stew. His short snout wouldn’t fit far enough down the mouth of the jar. He said nothing, but after that, he never played another joke on Stork.

Make a Paper Chain

Read the directions for making a paper chain. Then answer the questions.

What You Need

- paper
- pen or pencil
- scissors
- glue stick

What to Do

1. Fold a piece of paper in half the long way. Unfold and cut along the fold to make two long strips.

2. Glue the two strips together to make one long strip.

3. Fold one end of the paper to make a square. Then fold the square back in the other direction. Continue folding paper back and forth, accordion-style.

4. Draw the outline of a person, a daisy, or another shape onto the top fold. The shape must touch the edges of the paper where it is folded.

5. Cut out your shape. Make sure you don’t cut off the whole fold, or your chain will fall apart.

6. Open the paper chain.

1. What should you do before you start to follow the directions?

2. What will happen if you cut the whole fold?

Possible responses are shown.

- Read all the directions and get the materials.
- The chain will fall apart.

Lesson 20
Read the story summaries below. Think about what kind of narrative form each story is an example of. Then write the name of that narrative form on the line.

1. A princess pricks her finger on a needle. She and everyone in the castle fall asleep for 100 years. Eventually, a prince arrives, makes his way into the castle, and kisses the princess. She and everyone else wake up, and everyone lives happily ever after.

2. Bear used to have a very long tail. One winter, Fox made an ice hole in a frozen lake and told Bear to put his tail in it to catch a fish. Bear put his tail into the ice hole and kept it still for a long time. But instead of catching a fish, his tail froze and broke off. That is why Bear now has a short tail.

3. A lumberjack named Paul Bunyan is so huge that he created Minnesota’s ten thousand lakes with his footprints. His pancakes are made on a griddle so big that it takes 50 men skating with pork rinds tied to their feet to grease it.

4. The ancient Greek gods Athena and Poseidon compete to become the patron of the city of Athens. Athena gives the city an olive tree, and Poseidon gives it a saltwater spring. The people of the city prefer the olive tree, so Athena becomes the patron of Athens.

With your child, pick one of the summaries above. Work together to add more description to it. Then have your child tell the tale to others.

Pete Leong and his family had just moved to Chicago. Pete still missed his friends back in Dallas. One day Pete and his brother Matt were playing catch in the park. Matt threw the ball too high, and it went sailing over Pete’s head. Pete ran after it, but before he could grab the ball, it was snatched up by a huge black dog. “Oh no!” Pete thought. “Now what am I going to do?”

Just then the dog’s owner came up. He was about Pete’s age. “Sorry. Elsie likes to play catch,” he said, pulling the ball out of his dog’s mouth.

“Thanks,” said Pete, taking the ball. “She’s better at catch than I am! Do you two want to play with us?” That’s how Pete made his first new friend in Chicago.

Walter Johnson and his father had returned from their day-long hike. That morning, Walter’s father had locked up their food to keep it safe from animals. All around the locked container they saw huge tracks. The tracks were bigger than those made by Walter’s German shepherd.

“Hey, Dad, have you seen my backpack?” Walter asked. “I left it in the tent, but it’s gone.”

“You didn’t have any food in it, did you?” his father asked. Suddenly Walter remembered the apple he’d left in his pack!

Well, Diary, here we all are on the plane to Japan. It’s certainly been a hectic month since Dad found out he was being sent to his company’s office in Tokyo for two years. That’s on the other side of the world! I won’t know anyone. I won’t be able to speak the language or read a sign. Dad left right away, so Mom and I had to do the packing. Bart and Davey were no help at all. (Little brothers never are!) My friend Bridget thinks I’m lucky. She keeps saying things like, “Miranda, this is a great opportunity.” I don’t feel lucky, though. How can I enjoy myself in a place where I don’t know anyone and can’t speak the language? Mom just gave me a CD titled “40 Easy Steps to Learning Japanese.” This will be a long flight. I think I’ll listen to the CD and see if I can learn a few Japanese words.

Waldorf was happy as an indoor cat, but sometimes he wondered what it was like out in the world. One day he decided to join his friend Margo on an outdoor adventure. First they went to the park to chase pigeons. Then they ran along the tops of fences and teased neighborhood dogs.

By the end of the afternoon, Waldorf was very tired. He said good-bye to his friend and returned home to his favorite spot by the window. As he lay in the sun, he decided that adventures were fun once in a while, but they don't need to happen every day.

Summers meant that Tracey got to help her parents out at the newsstand. She loved watching the steady stream of people pass by on the busy city streets. She also enjoyed listening to the buskers who played music inside the subway. Her favorite was an older man named Charles. He played the saxophone right across from the newsstand. Tracey loved hearing the deep timbre of the sax as it echoed through the station. One day Tracey offered Charles a newspaper in exchange for a song. Charles shook his head and said his eyesight was too bad to read the news. After much thought, Tracey hatched this plan: Each day, Charles would play her a song, and she would read him the top news stories.

Circle the letter of the ending that makes the most sense.

1. If you see a stream of people, you see _______.
   A a steady flow of people       C people stuck in a traffic jam
   B people swimming in a river    D people walking in the rain

2. A busker is a _______.
   A bus driver                    C subway passenger
   B person who makes records     D street musician

Read the paragraph. Then think about how the paragraph is organized. Use that information to fill in the graphic organizer.

Most pink shrimp that live in the red mangrove forests off Florida's southern coast travel south to the Dry Tortugas to lay their eggs. The Dry Tortugas are islands in the Gulf of Mexico just south of the Florida Keys. Pink shrimp lay their eggs in the warm water there between April and August. After hatching, the baby shrimp travel north on floating pieces of sea grass. At the mangrove forest, they find food and safe shelter. The young pink shrimp feed on tiny creatures they find in the sea grass that grows in the shallow waters there. The pink shrimp stay among the mangroves until they mature. Then, as adults, they head south in the fall and winter to the Dry Tortugas to repeat the cycle.

I’ll never forget the first time I met my best friend, Kat. We had just moved from Maine to England. I was outside kicking a soccer ball. Suddenly a girl burst out of the house next door.

“Oh, you play football!” she said. “I play football, too! My name’s Kat.”

Football? I didn’t know what she was talking about. “Hi, I’m Sierra,” I said.

“Come meet my mum!” said Kat. “My dad’s at work. He’s a lorry driver.”

Football? Mum? Lorry? I needed help! I followed Kat into her house. “Have some crisps!” she said, tossing me a bag of potato chips. With Kat’s help, I soon learned that in England, soccer is football, a mom is a mum, and a truck is a lorry. I found myself wondering what other things I would have to learn new names for in my new country!

My family is visiting San Francisco for a few days. Today was a lot of fun! First, we took a bus tour of the whole city. We went up and down a lot of hills, and drove across the Golden Gate Bridge and back. Next, we went to Golden Gate Park. There we visited the deYoung Museum and had tea at the Japanese Tea Garden. I loved climbing over the steep Drum Bridge in the garden. After that, we took a long walk through North Beach and Chinatown. North Beach has been called “Little Italy,” and we ate dinner at an Italian restaurant there. By that time, we were all very tired. Then we did one last thing: we took a cable car ride. I wonder what we’ll do tomorrow.

Lorna and Brianna had been walking in a neighborhood in New York City all afternoon. They had bought jade bracelets, silk purses, and Chinese paper lanterns for their friends back home.

Now it was dinnertime. Lorna and Brianna were looking at menus. “I don’t know what these foods are!” Lorna said. She picked up a pair of chopsticks. “And I don’t know how to use these!”

A friendly waiter showed them how to use the chopsticks. They enjoyed all the Chinese foods they tried. After the meal, the waiter brought one last treat. Brianna opened her thin, crisp folded cookie and pulled out a slip of paper. “Long life is in store for you,” she read.

Read the passage below. Use context clues to figure out the meanings of the underlined words.

The Jackson family had just moved to a new community. Their three pets had moved with them. Toby the dog, Fluffy the cat, and Beaky the parrot were talking about the move.

“You’re lucky, Toby, you get to go outside! I have to stay in!” said Fluffy dejectedly.

“Don’t be so gloomy!” said Toby. “I get to go outside because I am a human’s best friend.”

“You’re so pompous!” said Beaky. “You think you’re so special and important!”

“Look who’s talking!” snapped Toby. “In fact, look who’s always talking!”

“The family likes me because I’m garrulous,” replied Beaky. “My cheerful chattering gets them in a good mood.”

“The family likes all of us,” said Fluffy, “although they might not if they could fathom our conversations.”

Circle the letter of the answer that makes the most sense.

1. If you say something dejectedly, you say it ______.
   A cheerfully   C unhappily
   B excitedly   D sleepily

2. If someone is pompous, he or she is ______.

Most people agree that Triceratops must have been an amazing dinosaur to look at. First of all, it had three horns on its face. Two were on its forehead, and the other was on its snout. Its mouth looked like a thick beak, but it also had big teeth for grinding plants. Its most unusual feature was a large bony frill behind its head. Use the information in the chart to write a summary of “Grand Canyon: A Trail Through Time”
Most landforms need millions of years to take shape, but a few are created very rapidly. The Palm Islands are examples of landforms that were formed quickly. A good guess would be that they were made by a volcano. That isn’t the case, however. Each island was built in less than ten years. Big machines brought up tons of sand from the seabed. The islands were created in the shape of palm trees. A ring of rocks protects each island from the waves. Sand is already being carried away from some places, though, and being dropped in others. No one knows how long these artificial islands will stay above water.

Choose a nonfiction magazine or book to read with your child. Work with your child to identify the main ideas and supporting details.
Look at the diagram and read the paragraph. Then answer the questions below.

1. How do the diagram and the paragraph work together? _________________

2. What information do the diagram and the paragraph give about the kind of stone that fossils are found in? _________________

3. What did you learn about fossils by looking only at the diagram? _______________

Fossils are created when an animal or plant is quickly buried in mud or sand. Over time, the soft parts of the animal or plant usually rot away. Only the hard parts, such as bone and shell, remain. As more and more layers build up above, the mud or sand layer is compressed into sedimentary rock around the hard parts, creating a fossil.

Possible responses are shown.

The paragraph tells how fossils are formed. The diagram shows where some fossils were found. Together, they help readers understand how fossils are formed.

The diagram shows fossils in shale. The paragraph says that fossils are compressed into sedimentary rock. Shale must be one kind of sedimentary rock.

Fossils are formed inside shale between other layers of rock.

Read the story below. Then complete the chart by writing the type of figurative language and the meaning of each example. Then answer the question.

Big Gil Finley was the best fisherman who ever lived. Born on the East Coast, he grew up eating fish for breakfast, lunch, dinner, and dessert. By the time he was fifteen, people said he was a great walrus, and his arms were as strong as moray eels.

One summer he traveled to Minnesota to go fishing with his best friend, his fishing pole. Minnesota was bone-dry back then. Big Gil had to cast his fishing line right through the soil to the groundwater below. He’d give a tug, and a fish would shoot up through the ground like a rocket. All the fish he caught that way were dirty from tip to tail. That made Big Gil so mad that he kicked a hole in the ground. The hole was as big as a lake, which gave Big Gil an idea. He grabbed a rain cloud and squeezed its rain into the hole. The fish in the groundwater smelled the new lake and swam up into it. That was the first of 10,000 lakes Big Gil Finley made in Minnesota.

Read each section of "John Muir and Stickeen." Then fill in the chart with the sequence of events.

Section 1 pages 751–753

- John and Stickeen meet. John thinks Stickeen is coddled and worthless. Stickeen shakes water on John, follows him around and scares him when he is fishing.

Section 2 pages 754–755

- John goes exploring on a glacier and Stickeen follows. They become lost and have to jump over a crack in the ice.

Section 3 pages 756–757

- John and Stickeen come to a very wide crack in the ice. John crosses the chasm on an ice bridge, but Stickeen is afraid. John cannot coax him to cross, so he walks away.

Section 4 pages 758–761

- Stickeen starts to cross the ice bridge. He sees John and realize that John did not really leave. This gives Stickeen the courage to make it to safety. John realizes that Stickeen is a brave dog, and the two form a lasting bond.

Think about the information above. Then, on a separate sheet of paper, write a summary of "John Muir and Stickeen." Include the major events from each section.
Look at each underlined example in the paragraph below. Write in the chart what type of figurative language each example is and its meaning. Then answer the question.

The seeds of adventure began to grow inside John Muir when he was just a child. By the time he had grown up, though, he had become an industrial engineer with little chance to explore the wilderness. Then, when he nearly lost his eyesight in a factory accident, he decided to pursue his true interests. He did nothing but follow his passion for nature. He set out on a thousand-mile walk from Indiana to Florida and kept a pace as steady as a ticking clock. Along the way, the sun and the moon smiled down on him as he jotted down descriptions of every wild thing he saw. In time, John Muir would make his mark as an explorer, a writer, and a preserver of wild lands.

Submersibles are highly effective tools for deep-sea exploring. These small underwater vessels can take as many as three people 20,000 feet under the sea! Submersibles have huge view ports and nimble collecting arms to scoop up samples. Using submersibles, scientists have discovered hundreds of new deep-sea life forms. Scientists aren’t the only people using submersibles. Moviemakers have used them to film deep-sea shipwrecks.

Sandcastle Sally grew up in a palace under the sea. She liked playing with golden treasures and oyster shells filled with pearls. But there was one thing Sally loved more than life itself. She loved building sand castles.

Sally was a lighthouse of a girl, so you can imagine how tall her sand castles were. Some stretched so high that their tops poked through the ocean's surface. Because Sally baked her castle bricks in an undersea volcano, her sand castles were hard. Many still stand today as islands in the sea.

One day, Sandcastle Sally heard about the huge red sand dunes on Mars. Curious as a kitten, she hopped on a comet and rode it to Mars. The red planet welcomed Sally and gave her its biggest dune as a workshop. There, she built one giant red sand castle after another. Someday perhaps you’ll be able to hop on a comet and go to see her creations.
